

GASE PROJECT

Pitch Kit & Business Briefing

*Your private preparation notes for the client meeting. Not to be shared with the client.

Client: GASE — Global Alliance for Sustainable Excellence. Tagline: “Building a Better Future Through Excellence.”

1. Business Understanding — Know GASE

Company snapshot

- What it is: GASE = Global Alliance for Sustainable Excellence — a Business Excellence consultancy.
- Founded: 2014. Size: ~11–50 employees — a boutique, specialist firm (not a huge consultancy).
- Industry: International Trade & Development / Business Excellence consulting.
- Phone: 9811585877.
- In one line: They help organizations get measurably better at running themselves — and then help them win prestigious awards that prove it.

What business are they actually in?

- There is a whole industry called “Business Excellence” (or Operational Excellence / Quality). Big organizations — especially manufacturers — want a structured, scored way to answer: “How good are we really, and how do we become world-class?”
- They play three roles at once: Consultants (advise & improve), Assessors (score maturity, give a rating), and Award guides (walk clients through winning a recognized excellence award).
- How they earn: B2B service fees — assessment projects, advisory retainers, training, and award-journey engagements.
- Most important fact: It is a high-trust, relationship-driven business. Deals are won on credibility and track record — not on a “buy now” button.

Their services, in plain language

- Assessments & Ratings — trained assessors score how mature/good you are and give an independent rating (like a credit score, but for organizational excellence).
- Benchmarking — compares your score against peers and the best-in-class, so the number has real context.
- Advisory & Consulting — hands-on help to actually fix the gaps: strategy, process improvement, deployment.
- Capability Building / DOJO — training staff so the improvements stick after the consultants leave.
- Recognition & Awards — guiding clients to win formal excellence awards (their headline specialty).
- Reporting / ESG — documenting and disclosing sustainability performance.
- The clever pitch: these form a loop — assess → benchmark → improve → get recognized → repeat. That is the “one integrated platform” idea.

Jargon decoder — terms they will use

- Business Excellence Model — a framework of criteria defining “what a great organization looks like.” Global ones: EFQM (Europe), Baldrige (USA), Deming Prize (Japan).
- CII-EXIM Bank Award — India’s most prestigious business-excellence award. Run since 1994 by the CII (Confederation of Indian Industry) and EXIM Bank, based on the EFQM model. Winning it = “role-model” status. GASE guides companies through this journey.

- TPM / TPM Excellence Award — TPM = Total Productive Maintenance, a famous Japanese method for maximum equipment reliability (built on 8 pillars). The award is given by JIPM (Japan Institute of Plant Maintenance) and is a big deal for factories. GASE runs “TPM Excellence Award journeys.”
- DOJO — Japanese for a training hall. In industry, a hands-on area where workers practice a task on real equipment until they master it — “learn by doing.”
- MSME — Micro, Small & Medium Enterprises. “Vendor / MSME upgradation” = helping a big company’s smaller suppliers reach standard.
- Value Chain — all the linked activities a company does to create value (strategy, operations, supply chain, quality, sales...). GASE’s angle: excellence across the whole value chain, not one department.
- Strategy Deployment (Hoshin Kanri) — a Japanese method of cascading top strategy into every team’s goals. It’s in their specialties.
- ESG — Environmental, Social, Governance — how sustainable/responsible a company is. Ties into their “Sustainable” brand.

Who their customers are

- Proven sweet spot: manufacturing companies (automotive, engineering, process), large enterprises and PSUs (government-owned firms) chasing awards, and their suppliers / MSMEs.
- Growth ambition: education, healthcare, services, startups, and ESG — the broader sectors their brand talks about.

A sharp insight (will impress them)

- Their proven track record is heavily manufacturing / operational (TPM, CII, DOJO, safety, vendor upgradation)...
- ...but the GASE brand positions them very broadly — “every sector, every function, ESG, digital, the whole value chain.”
- The read: this is a deliberate growth / repositioning move — a specialist manufacturing-excellence firm presenting as a broad, sector-agnostic platform. Raise it as a question (below), not a statement — it makes you look strategic.

The website’s real job (for a trust-led B2B service)

- 1. Build credibility fast — “these people are serious experts” (awards, frameworks, track record, case studies).
- 2. Explain a complex, abstract service — clearly, to a busy executive.
- 3. Generate qualified leads — get a decision-maker to book a call / request an assessment.
- 4. Support sales — something impressive to send a prospect after a meeting.

2. The Meeting Script

Tone: calm, consultative, curious. You are a specialist who already gets their world — not a vendor begging for work. Let them talk ~40% of the time.

① Open & build rapport (2–3 min)

“Thanks for making the time. Before I talk about anything technical, I’d love to understand your goals properly — a website is only good if it actually grows the business. Can I ask you a few quick questions first?”

Then ask 2–3 of these and listen:

- Who’s your ideal client — manufacturers and PSUs where you’re strongest, or genuinely broader across all sectors now?
- When someone lands on your site, what’s the one thing you want them to do — call you, request an assessment, download something?
- What’s not working about how you present GASE today?

② Show them you understand their business (the winning move, 3–4 min)

“Here’s how I see GASE. You’re in a trust business — Business Excellence consulting. Companies don’t buy this off a page; they buy it because they believe you’re genuinely expert. Your credibility comes from real proof — your CII-EXIM Bank award journeys, your TPM Excellence work, DOJO training, vendor and MSME upgradation. So your website has one job before anything else: make a serious decision-maker trust you in 10 seconds, and then make it effortless to start a conversation.”

“That’s very different from an e-commerce or a generic corporate site — and it’s exactly how I’d design yours: credibility first, then a clear path to ‘request an assessment.’”

Watch for the “oh, this person gets it” reaction — that moment is usually when you’ve won.

③ Why you (2 min)

“I work as a specialist, not a factory. You’ll deal with me directly — fast responses, no account-manager telephone game. I build custom sites, not templates, so yours will look like GASE, reflect your value-chain story, and work perfectly on mobile. And I structure everything around your services — assess, benchmark, advise, recognize — so the site reinforces your ‘one integrated platform’ message.”

④ Present the plan (2 min)

“I’d deliver this in 20 working days, in clear stages, so you always know what’s happening and you sign off before we move forward. You’re never in the dark, and there are no surprises.”

Walk them through the 20-day plan (Section 4) — one line each. Emphasize the sign-off gates: they approve the design before you build.

⑤ The investment & terms (2 min)

Say the number calmly and don’t flinch. Then immediately anchor it to value.

“For the complete custom website — design, all the pages, mobile, animations, contact enquiry, and launch — the investment is ₹_____. To get started I take 50% in advance, which books your slot and covers discovery and design, and the balance is tied to milestones so you only pay as you see progress.”

“One honest thing: the quality depends on getting your content, logos and testimonials on time — if that’s ready, 20 days is very comfortable.”

⑥ Handle objections (only if they come up)

If they say...	You say...
"That's a bit high."	I understand. This is a fully custom build, not a template — it's an asset that wins you enquiries for years. I can also phase it: launch the core pages first, add extras later, to fit the budget.
"Why the 50% advance?"	It's standard for custom work — it books my calendar exclusively for you and covers the design phase, the heaviest lift. It also shows we're both committed.
"Can you do it faster?"	I can prioritise the homepage and key pages first so you have something live quickly, then complete the rest — but 20 days ensures it's properly tested, not rushed.
"We'll think about it."	Of course. To hold the start date and this price, I just need the go-ahead and the advance this week — I only take on a couple of projects at a time.

⑦ Close (ask for it — don't trail off)

"If you're happy with the direction, I'll send a short written proposal today with everything we discussed. Once you confirm and the advance is in, I can start on [date] and you'll see the first design in under a week. Shall I send it over?"

3. The Full Conversation (Word-for-Word)

A natural, real meeting you can rehearse out loud. Text in (brackets) is a coaching cue — not a line to speak.

Placeholders: [₹ your price], [start date].

Setting: their office, morning. Keep it warm and unhurried — you are a peer, not a salesman. Let them talk about 40% of the time.

YOU: Good morning, sir — thanks for having me.

CLIENT: Morning! Come, sit, sit. You found the place okay?

YOU: Yes sir, no trouble — your directions were spot on.

CLIENT: (warm) Good, good. Tea or coffee — what will you have?

YOU: Coffee would be lovely, thank you.

CLIENT: (to his assistant, then to you) Two coffees, please... So — you make websites.

YOU: I do — but honestly, before I say a word about design, I'd like to understand your business first. A website's only useful if it actually does something for you. Is it okay if I ask you a few things first?

CLIENT: Please, please. Ask.

YOU: When a company comes to GASE — what are they really coming to you for?

CLIENT: See, we're into business excellence. We assess organizations, we take them through award journeys — CII-EXIM, TPM Excellence — consulting, DOJO training, vendor and MSME upgradation. Basically we help them become world-class, and get recognized for it.

YOU: (nodding) Right. And who's the ideal client for you — mostly manufacturers and PSUs, where I'd guess you're strongest? Or are you going after everyone now?

CLIENT: Honestly, both. Our roots are in manufacturing — that's where we've done our best work. But we want to grow — services, education, healthcare, this whole ESG space. The name is "Global Alliance," na — it's meant to be broad.

YOU: Makes sense. Last one — when someone lands on your website, what's the one thing you'd love them to do? Call you, fill a form, download something?

CLIENT: Contact us, mainly. Start a conversation. Most of our work is through references, but people do check the website first — they want to see if we're serious.

YOU: (this is the moment — slow right down) See, that — that's the whole thing, right there. Can I tell you how I'm seeing GASE?

CLIENT: Tell me.

YOU: You're in a trust business. Nobody buys business-excellence consulting off a web page like it's a product on Amazon. They buy it because they believe you're genuinely expert — and that belief comes from proof. Your CII-EXIM journeys, the TPM work, DOJO, MSME upgradation. So the website really has one job before anything else: make a serious person trust you in about ten seconds — and then make it dead simple for them to start that conversation you just mentioned.

CLIENT: (nodding slowly) Yes... yes, exactly. You've understood it correctly.

YOU: So that's how I'd build it. Credibility first — your frameworks, your track record, the awards you've guided people to, real numbers wherever we have them. Then one clear, obvious path to "request an assessment" or "talk to us." It's a completely different approach from a shop or a generic template — but it's the right one for a firm like yours.

CLIENT: I like this. Most people just come and ask me, “sir, how many pages, what colour.” Nobody asks about the business.

YOU: (smiling) That’s the difference, honestly. I’d rather build you something that brings in enquiries than something pretty that just sits there. And practically — you’d deal with me directly. No account manager, no call centre. Quick replies, custom design, built around your services — assess, benchmark, advise, recognize — so the whole site tells that one connected story. And it’ll work properly on mobile, because that’s where half your visitors will open it.

CLIENT: Good. So how does it actually work — and how much time will it take?

YOU: About twenty working days — roughly a month — in clear stages, so you’re never wondering what’s happening. First we lock the plan and I collect your content, logo, testimonials. Then I design the main pages — and this part’s important — you approve the look before I build anything. Then I build it all, make it mobile-friendly, add the animations and the enquiry form. Then testing and your changes. And on the last day, we go live and I hand everything over. You sign off at every stage — no “where’s my website” phone calls.

CLIENT: (nodding) Okay, that’s organized — I like that. And the cost?

YOU: (say it calmly, then stop talking) For the full custom website — design, all the pages, mobile, the animations, the enquiry form, and taking it live — it’s [₹ your price]. To start, I take fifty percent in advance — that books your place in my schedule and covers the design phase — and the rest is tied to the stages, so you only pay as you see the work come together.

CLIENT: (pause) Hmm. It’s a bit more than I had in mind, I’ll be honest with you.

YOU: (don’t flinch, don’t rush to cut the price) I hear you — and I’d probably say the same in your chair. The reason it’s there is that it’s fully custom, nothing template — an asset that should earn you enquiries for years, not something you replace in six months. But look, I’m flexible on how we do it. If the budget’s tight right now, we can phase it — launch the main pages first, add the rest a little later — so it fits what’s comfortable for you today.

CLIENT: No, I understand the value. And this fifty percent advance — that’s the usual way?

YOU: Completely usual for custom work, yes. It blocks my calendar just for your project for those weeks, and covers the design stage — the heaviest part. Really it just means we’re both properly committed to doing it right.

CLIENT: Theek hai. Let me discuss internally and get back to you.

YOU: (then, gently) Of course — no pressure at all. I’ll send you a short written proposal today, with everything we’ve discussed — the plan, the stages, the price — so it’s all in front of you. I’ll be honest though: I only take a couple of projects at a time. So if you’d like to hold this start date and price, the sooner you confirm and the advance comes through, the sooner I can block it for you. Give me the nod this week and I can start by [start date] — you’d see your first design in under a week.

CLIENT: That’s fair. Send the proposal, give me a day or two.

YOU: Perfect — I’ll have it with you by this afternoon. And thank you, sir, really, for the time. I’ll be honest — I’m genuinely excited about this one. GASE has a strong story, and I’d love to be the one who tells it properly.

CLIENT: Thank you. Let’s talk soon.

Rehearsal tips

- The winning moment is the “trust business” line — say it slowly and let it land. That’s what sets you apart.
- After you say the price, stop talking. The silence feels long — let them respond first.
- Never drop the price without removing scope — offer to phase it instead. It protects your value.

- Always end by asking for the next step — the proposal and the advance. Don't let it trail off.

4. The 20-Day Delivery Plan

Present this as their safety net — sign-off gates mean no surprises. ~20 working days (about 4 weeks), assuming timely content and feedback.

Phase	Days	What happens	Sign-off
1 · Discovery & Planning	1–3	Requirements, sitemap, content plan, collect logo / brand / testimonials	Sitemap approved
2 · UI/UX Design	4–8	Homepage + key inner-page designs, colours, style	Design approved
3 · Development	9–16	Build all pages, mobile-responsive, animations, enquiry form	Staging preview
4 · Content, QA & Revisions	17–19	Real content in, cross-device / browser testing, 2 revision rounds	Final review
5 · Launch & Handover	20	Deploy live, quick training, handover docs	Go live

Tip: always say “assuming timely content and feedback” — it protects your timeline from client delays.

5. Pricing

What drives the price (say if questioned)

- Fully custom design (no template), 10+ unique pages, mobile-responsive, animations, brand-matched, enquiry form, testing, and launch.

Recommended range (India, freelance)

- Value / professional: ₹70,000 – ₹1,10,000 ← where this project fits.
- Entry / early-career: ₹40,000 – ₹60,000.
- Premium / agency-style: ₹1,20,000 +.
- Do this: pick ONE number and own it. The table below uses ₹1,00,000 only because the math is clean — replace it with yours.

How the amount maps to the 20 days

Phase	Share	Example (of ₹1,00,000)
Discovery & Planning	15%	₹15,000
UI/UX Design	25%	₹25,000
Development	40%	₹40,000
Content, QA & Revisions	15%	₹15,000
Launch & Handover	5%	₹5,000
Total	100%	₹1,00,000

6. Payment Schedule (50% advance)

Recommended — you get paid as you go

When	%	Example (₹1,00,000)
On confirmation (advance)	50%	₹50,000

When	%	Example (₹1,00,000)
At design approval (~Day 8)	25%	₹25,000
On launch & handover (Day 20)	25%	₹25,000

- Simpler alternative: 50% advance + 50% on launch.
- Formula for any total T: Advance = $T \times 0.5$, then two payments of $T \times 0.25$.

7. Scope & Upsells (protects you)

Included

- Custom design, up to ~10–11 pages, responsive, animations, enquiry form, 2 revision rounds, launch, basic handover.

Not included — quote separately (prevents scope creep)

- Logo / branding, content writing, professional photography, blog / CMS, backend / CRM integration, SEO campaign, hosting / domain, ongoing maintenance.

Easy upsells (bigger deal or recurring income)

- Content writing — most clients don't have polished copy ready.
- Blog / Insights + CMS — so they can post updates themselves.
- Annual maintenance retainer — e.g. ₹2,000–₹5,000 / month recurring revenue.
- SEO starter package — so they actually get found.

8. Practical Tips

- Send a one-page written proposal the same day. Whoever follows up professionally usually wins.
- Don't discount without removing scope. If they push price, drop a feature — don't just cut the number. It protects your value.
- Get the advance before you "start." No advance = not a client yet.
- Price the outcome, not your hours. You're selling a business asset that generates enquiries — that's the value. Keep every claim truthful (deliverables, timeline, inclusions) and you're on solid ground.
- Confidence one-liner: "I've set the site up to do what a business-excellence firm actually needs — build credibility and generate qualified enquiries, since this is a trust-led B2B service, not e-commerce."

Fill in before the meeting: your price (₹____), your name & contact, and the start date.
